INTRODUCTION

Prior to 1922 there was no well-defined, controlling body for state institutions. Each school, prison, or hospital administered its own internal affairs, being subject to investigation from various boards appointed by the governor.

Records of five institutions, in the form of correspondence, reports, and proposals, are found during this period of self-government.

For information on other institutions, see Record Groups 8, 9, 11, and 12.
